Anita H. Lehmann Architect

My natural tool is the pencil; I find economy, honesty and 'flow' in articulating a space, evoking character and meaning through line. I enjoy creating an interpretation of these varying pictures of the built environment, and opening a view on the world that others may not at first glance see. For me as an architect and illustrator, the pencil tells a story, and the line evokes the honest nature of a place, expressing – literally, weight, value and tone.

I received training in architectural drawing at the University of Washington, and freehand drawing in Rome.

I am a current member of the American Society of Architectural Illustrators. I reside in Seattle with my husband, two sons, and dog Izzy.
